

California Consumer Protection Act (CCPA)

Notice of Collection

Effective: January 1, 2025

Last Updated: December 15, 2024

The CCPA requires Partners Bank of California (PBoC) to inform consumers of the categories of Personal Information (PI) we collect and the purposes for which PI will be used.

PBoC collects and discloses the following categories of information for business purposes.

Your name, address, tax ID number, driver license, passport or ID card number, date of birth, telephone number, email address, bank account number, other financial information, dependent/beneficiary PI, benefit elections, internet or other electronic network activity including IP address, geolocation, browsing history and website interaction.

PBoC collects PI for a number of purposes including validating identification, communication with you, processing payroll, processing financial transactions, offering employment benefits, tracking benefit eligibility, target marketing and personalizing advertising that may be of interest to you.

Changes to this disclosure may be made at any time. When changes are made, the revised Policy will be posted to pbofca.com and will include a new “Effective” date.

For more information on your rights under the CCPA see our CCPA Online Privacy Policy:
